

```
<!doctype html>
<html>
  <head>
    <title>Area of a Circle</title>

    <meta name="author" content="Drapak">
    <meta charset="UTF-8">

    <!--This shows how to split your code into chunks:
      HTML for the user interface, & the javascript broken up into useful modules:
        input, calculation, output

      Created:      24. Feb 2015 -->

  </head>

  <script>
    /* This function calls each of the sub modules / function mainProcedure () { var radius  =0; / define the radius var so it can be seen by everything / var area    =0; / define the area var so it can be seen as well */ getRadius();
      calculateArea();
      displayArea();
    }

    /* getRadius looks inside the input line and stores that as the radius */ function getRadius() { radius  =document.getElementById("inputLine").value;
    }

    /* calculateArea calculates the area using A=pi(r^2), given the radius */ function calculateArea() { area    =radius * radius * Math.PI;
    }

    /* displayArea displays the answer inside the element with id="outputBlock" */ function displayArea() { document.getElementById("outputBlock").innerHTML  =area;
    }
  </script>

  <style>/* no style today! */</style>
</head>

<body>
  <h1>Area of a Circle</h1>

    Please enter the radius of the circle:
    <input type="text" id="inputLine" name="inputLine" size="5" autofocus="true">
    <button type="button" onclick="mainProcedure();">Calculate!</button>

  The area is: <output id="outputBlock" name="outputBlock"></output>

</body>
</html>
```